Community Connection

UMSL
University of Missouri–St. Louis

Dear friends, neighbors and community members,

We hope this message finds you well and staying cool! This month we are again excited to share good news about the events and initiatives taking place at UMSL, and in our community. For instance, we recently welcomed North County Inc. to their new home on UMSL's North campus. We also are celebrating 50 years of St. Louis Public Radio, which started broadcasting to the St. Louis region from Lucas Hall in 1972. Many things have changed in these last few decades, but one thing that has not is our commitment to the St. Louis community and our neighbors. That is one of the reasons why UMSL was selected as a satellite polling place for the upcoming primary and general St. Louis County elections, offering yet another way that the university can serve as a resource to our community.

UMSL is celebrating Governor Mike Parson's signing of the FY23 state budget on June 30. This budget contains an unprecedented level of funding for public higher education, including a one-time appropriation of $40 million for UMSL, which will support the transition of our campus beginning with the consolidation of the university's academic core on the North Campus and the establishment of the North County Business and Workforce District on the South Campus. Learn more here. The St. Louis County Council is currently considering the south campus project as one of the projects funded with their remaining ARPA dollars. More to come as this develops.

As we continue to journey forward, we hope you find inspiration in some of the stories below and that you make use of the resources listed. You will see that our July listing has many food connections with mobile pantries and farmers markets a plenty. This is the time of year to find an array of berries and melons, as well as peaches and tomatoes ready to be enjoyed. In the days ahead, I hope you have a chance to savor the sweetness of summer and take time to celebrate the good things happening in our community.

Gratefully forward,

Kristin Sobolik

KSDK, Corey Miller; June 11, 2022

Anandra Chaney is the only golfer for Normandy High School. But she hopes her passion inspires other students who look like her to follow her lead to the course.

Normandy High School soon-to-be junior golfer Anandra Chaney remembers her first encounter with the sport of golf. Let's just say it wasn't a perfect fit right off the bat. "Oh... I remember the first time I ever picked up a club and swung and my ball went right in front of me," Chaney laughed. But she wasn't discouraged, and saw something in the other golfers that made her want to continue on. Read more.

College of Education hosts inaugural Future Teacher Leadership Academy for local high school students

LaChe' Smith was one of a dozen students diligently brainstorming during a June morning in the Ed Collab at the University of Missouri–St. Louis. She and her peers had a task: discuss common classroom expectations for educators and examine how those expectations can sometimes be detrimental and, subsequently, reimaged. They eagerly bounced ideas off of each other, documenting them on a handful of whiteboards scattered throughout the room, before sharing with everyone. “We talk a lot about implicit bias, and I think that’s really important to learn, especially going into a teaching career,” Smith said, referring to the day’s discussion.

The scene was part of UMSL’s inaugural Future Teacher Leadership Academy. The free two-week program, which ran from June 13-24, aimed to encourage high school students in the St. Louis region to envision careers in education. The program is a joint effort between the College of Education and the UMSL Office of Precollegiate Services and was funded primarily through a $30,000 grant from the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

The first FTLA group represented a broad socioeconomic and geographic spectrum, including 11 high school students and one recent high school graduate from the Ferguson-Florissant School District. Read more.

St. Louis Public Radio turns 50, and looks to the future

St. Louis Public Radio, Alex Heuer

Fifty years ago, a radio station with the call letters KWMU made its debut in St. Louis. Broadcasting from Lucas Hall on the University of Missouri-St. Louis campus, KWMU (now St. Louis Public Radio) introduced the very concept of public radio to St. Louis.

Station founder Don Driemeier, who also served as dean of UMSL's School of Business, identified the need for public radio in St. Louis in 1971. Read more.
